Hi James,

Thanks for reaching out.

I am afraid that there is no 'paper' contract I can provide you with.

The online agreement acts like a contract between all parties, as it does on any domain name platforms.
See below the negotiation history.

While I can't forward you the conversations we had with the seller about the supported disbursement method which content is confidential, please find below the messages we received from the seller confirming that he will not honor his $50,000 offer nor the agreement.

As previously informed, there is no additional information we can provide as the seller has yet to sign up for an account on Escrow.com; he didn't agree to the Terms of the transaction nor fill in his full details in his Escrow profile.

Best,
Elsa

Nope, sorry, I changed my mind. This was too easy, I'm either leaving a lot of money on the table or it is a scam. Either way, no sale.

If you want to make a reasonable offer, then you are encouraged to do so.

Hi Elsa,

Jonathan has passed this dispute on to our Legal department, and we are preparing to take the necessary steps to move forward with a breach of contract claim. May I ask that you send me any records you have with Mr. Merryman, including in particular the specific contract/terms he agreed to when he accepted the offer and entered into the transaction)?

Thank you,

Jim Medek

Hi Jonathan,

Unfortunately, I have bad news.

While the seller has yet to confirm whether he can provide a supported disbursement method or not, he is also refusing to honor the agreed price of $50,000 - asking for $100,000 now.

While I did remind the seller that any offers made and/or agreements reached on our platform are legally binding - as per our Terms, and failing to honor this agreement is a breach of contract, he is still refusing to collaborate and complete the transaction for the agreed price.

The seller is Dick Merryman and his email address is dicko@wormhole.com..

Please let me know how you'd like to proceed.

Thanks for your feedback,
Elsa

Hi Jonathan,

Apologies for my late feedback.
I was out of office so I am now catching up with all messages.

Any offers made and/or agreements reached on our platform are legally binding, as per our Terms.
<https://domainagents.com/terms>
<http://support.domainagents.com/support/solutions/articles/5000523212-are-negotiations-legally-binding->

The seller was informed during the negotiation process and when he made/confirmed each offer in his DA account.
He hasn't agreed to the Terms of the transaction on Escrow.com, though.

The seller answered that he is still reluctant to complete the transaction on Escrow.
He has yet to provide a supported disbursement method.

I talked again to him today, trying to convince him to honor the agreement reached with you.

If no feedback by Monday, I will send you his name and email address (we don't have other details as he hasn't signed up for an account on Escrow.com).

I will keep you posted with any updates.
Best,
Elsa

Also, please send the Terms and Conditions that Buyer & Seller agree to. I clicked through it on the website during the negotiation process but I don't see it now.
